Frank McCann Spoke to Class

One of the purposes of the Distributive Education Club is to carry out projects that tie in with classroom and on the job instruction. In the DE Class the students were talking and studying legal responsibilities that merchants have to their customers. The best person to answer the many questions that arose was a lawyer. The students decided to ask Mr. Frank McCann to come and talk to them and help solve some of the questions that had arisen.

Mr. McCann graciously accepted the invitation and came a very prepared and informative talk. He first understand just what is meant by a "duty." He defined "duty" legally as meaning an effort one person owes another person or a group of persons.

Mr. McCann then told the students some of the duties that a merchant has to his customers and gave examples. One duty of the merchant is to show due care that his premises are safe. He illustrated this with examples of ice on the sidewalk in front of the store or a faulty door entering the establishment. Another duty of the merchant relates to the goods sold to the customers. He also explained the implied guarantee which means that the product is fit for the purpose for which it is made and sold. He also explained what was meant by expressed guarantee of the goods sold to the customers. He also pointed out responsibilities of the merchant in the cases of fraud.

The students appreciated Mr. McCann taking his time to talk to them and regretted that the time allowed passed so quickly.

New York.- Maureen Lyons, is now the legal owner of $970 she found in a trash can in a school yard last June 12. While waiting for a friend, the little girl glanced into the basket and saw the bills sticking out of a white envelope. She turned it over to police, who had to wait the required waiting period for owners to claim it, gave it back to Maureen.

Statistics Show Low Death Rate Was Set in 1956

NEW YORK—A new low death rate was recorded last year among the owners of America's 85,000,000 ordinary life insurance policies, the Institute of Life Insurance reported today.

The 1956 death rate was 581.7 per 100,000, compared with 598.3 the year before and 668.8 ten years earlier.

The improvement reflects some 9,000 fewer policyholder deaths in 1956 than would have occurred had the previous year's rate still applied and 45,000 fewer when compared with the 1946 rate.

Other causes of death showed death rates in the past year. Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistical and consultant on health and welfare of the Institute, said in commenting on the year's tabulation. "Once again, tuberculosis showed a marked decline as a cause of death, the 1956 rate of 2.8 per 100,000 being 13 percent under that of the previous year and 84 percent under the 1946 rate. At the same time, last year was the second consecutive year to see a reduced death rate from cancer, the fourth consecutive year for the diseases of the heart and circulatory system and the fifth consecutive year for accidents."

The heart and circulatory diseases remained the No. 1 cause of death in 1956, accounting for 57 percent of all deaths among ordinary insurance policyholders.

Immigration Adds To Our Population

NEW YORK—Immigration added 3.2 million persons to the population of the United States—or about one-ninth of the total population increase—between 1946 and the end of 1956.

Following the historic pattern of immigration into this country, the majority of the newcomers were of European origin. However, their proportion of the total was considerably below that of earlier decades. In fact, during 1903-56 not quite two-fifths came from continental Europe, and less than one-tenth came from the British Isles; by contrast, the proportion of immigrants from Europe and the British Isles was at least nine-tenths prior to World War I.

Various groups have swelled the tide of immigration during the post-war period, the statisticians point out. Nearly 120,000 wives and children of service men were one such group; the Refugee Relief Act provided for 209,000 special quota-exempt visas between August 1953 and December 31, 1956; and Hungarian refugees accounted for 32,000 immigrants since November of last year.

Spain's Santiago Is Regaining New Favor

WASHINGTON — There was a time when all roads led not to Rome but to Spain's holy city, Santiago de Compostela.

This medieval city—the traditional burial place of St. James the Elder—was once the most visited shrine in western Europe. Over the course of centuries, it is likely that only Jerusalem and Rome have drawn more Christian pilgrims.

Though time dimmed its glory, Santiago has remained a crossroads of Christendom. And once again, travelers are discovering the city whose gray stone towers rise from a hillside in Galicia, the northwest corner of the Iberian Peninsula.

Santiago is considered one of Europe's architectural gems — a charming composite of many styles. It is among the very few cities that Spain has elevated to the rank of National Monument. Flagstone streets, too narrow for traffic, press beneath arches and arcades to converge on the magnificent, 900-year-old Cathedral.

Clogged Ears Hazardous To Swimming Safety

CHICAGO—Wax in a swimmer's ears—particularly in only one ear—may lead to seriour or even dangerous consequences, a Philadelphia otolaryngologist reports.

Dr. Albert P. Selzer said that dizziness sometimes occurs when a person swims in cold water which enters his ears and causes abnormal activity in the ears' labyrinths where the sense of equilibrium is controlled.

Dizziness is especially likely to occur when only one ear is clogged with wax, he said. Cold water cannot reach that ear's labyrinth, but does reach the labyrinth of the unclogged car. This sets up two different unbalanced reactions and produces dizziness and inability to tell body position.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

How do the clouds sometimes telegraph the arrival of a warm front? Why are they easier to predict than the arrival of cold fronts?

A warm front arrives over our head before you are usually aware of it. That is because the leading edge of a warm front slants forward at the top. Usually this slant is considerable, extending over a distance of hundreds of miles.

Therefore, when cirrus clouds appear far up in the sky, after a clear day, it may well mean that a warm front is approaching. These ice clouds very often are the first sign in the sky that a warm front is on its way.

In twelve to twenty-four hours, you will probably experience rain. Certainly, the clouds will be lower and in twenty-four to be cumulus rain clouds.

When you see a halo around moon, or the familiar sundog then, or thin ice clouds in the it may well be the first warm front.

Pilot Watershed Project In Appomattox County Points Way To Better Conservation.

This is an aerial view of the first Flood Water Retarding Structure built in Appomattox County on the East Fork Falling River Watershed. It forms a permanent pool covering 17 acres and is 12 feet deep near the dam. As a flood control measure it will back water up that will cover 30 acres of mostly wooded area and let the water run out at a regulated flow to protect land below.
